- Jardine's revolutionary new GP1-R exhaust system is now shipping for all 2008-11 Honda CBR1000RR models.
- The GP1-R is dyno-proven to deliver noticeable power gains throughout the RPM range.
- The GP1-R has a unique under-frame design that reduces overall weight by up to 10 pounds when compared to stock systems, and lowers the bike's center of gravity.

Corona, Calif. – May 9, 2012 – Jardine Performance Products has announced that the GP1-R Full Exhaust System is now shipping for all 2008-11 Honda CBR1000RR models. The GP1-R's race-inspired looks and sound perfectly compliment the CBR's cutting edge performance and styling, and will make your bike stand out.

The GP1-R system was designed to bring the look, sound and performance of GP racing machines to the street. Its high-flow design delivers noticeable power gains throughout the RPM range, and the use of lightweight materials saves up to ten pounds over stock exhaust systems. The unique under-frame mounting also improves handling response by helping to lower your bike's center of gravity.

Each GP1-R system is constructed from high-quality TIG-welded 304 stainless steel at Jardine's production facility in Corona, California. Each kit includes a full GP1-R exhaust system, a custom exhaust fairing designed specifically for each application, detailed mounting instructions and all of the necessary hardware for a quick and easy installation.
